Eighth Graders Going to High School

By Lauryn Colby and Caitlin Craven

High School. To some it might be scary and to some it might be exciting. We asked some eighth graders a few questions about the big move. First, we asked if they thought it would be stressful making the transition from being the oldest in the school to the youngest. They told us that it would be stressful at first, but after getting settled, it would be fine. We also asked them what classes they were most excited for. Their reply was that there is a huge variety of classes, including the basics, law and ethics, computer classes, art and music classes, chorus, and band. One person is most excited for the new band program. The least favorite part of moving to the high school is waking up early and having to get to know all new teachers. Good luck to all the new high schoolers and have fun!

Henry Fleury Wins!

By Gwendolyn Kelly

Did you know that there was an art contest at the Kimball Jenkins Estate? Eight drawings were submitted from Bow Memorial School. We were so excited to hear that Henry Fleury won the People's Choice Award. The people voted his picture as their favorite. They displayed and framed his work at the Kimball Jenkins Estate. Others were on display at the downtown building next to Bagel Works. Henry has been drawing wonderful pictures for years. He is an amazing artist and we are all very proud of him.

Winning Track Team

By Zoe Jukoski, Megan Remick, and Brianna Boone

Track is a good way to keep in shape and it makes you better at running. The track team placed first in two meets and second in another. All of the girls and boys relay teams ended up qualifying for the State Meet. Most people qualified for an event as well. At the State Meet the boys placed 2nd overall, and the girls placed 6th overall. What an amazing track season!

Haunted.....

By Annaliese Kaufmann and Madeline Lessard

I wake up with my little brother's nose inches from my face. I roll over, check my alarm clock, and am ready to yell at him when it reads 4:06 AM!!!!

"JOE....." My sister Alex also seems ready for him to learn a serious lesson.

"No, seriously, Logan....I think you should come see this," Joe says softly.

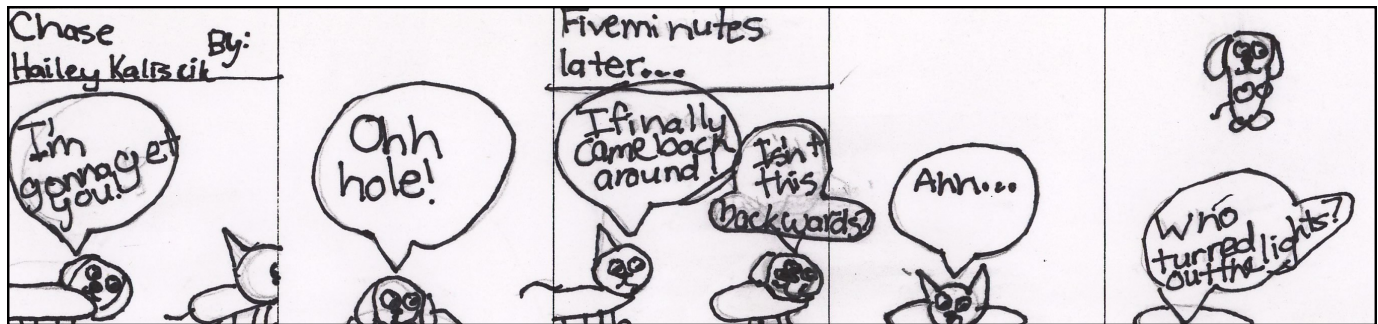

Well, since he at least knows he shouldn't wake me up at the crack of dawn any more, I sigh, pick up some clothes, and run to the bathroom before Alex. When I'm dressed, I run down to the kitchen and shovel some Fruit Loops into my mouth. Joe is already waiting for me downstairs. I follow him and Alex outside. It's early, so the sky is grey and there is mist in the air. Our Alaskan malamute puppy, Jiang, follows us out the door, nose in the air.

Joe leads us down to the water, which has curls of fog rising off of it as the sun rises. "Presto!" Joe brags as he points to a boat. I don't know how else to describe it, but imagine a boat being smashed against a thousand trees and then being dragged across a field of rot the size of the Pacific Ocean. Next, this boat is sent to be attacked by monster lobsters, and then is finally put into our small harbor.

"THIS? THIS IS WHAT YOU WOKE ME UP AT AN ABNORMAL HOUR FOR?! JOE, YOU ARE SO IN TROUBLE!" Alex shrieked. All of a sudden, there is a moaning cry.

We look at each other.....then, we see an eerie black glow....and a black shadow comes hurtling out at us, screaming.....

A Day in the Life of Mrs. Hall

By: Ruby Towne, Evelyn Hatem, and Emily Barker

We interviewed Mrs. Hall to find out about her day. First, we asked her what she eats for breakfast in the morning. She told us she likes to drink a smoothie made from spinach, kale, fruit/berries, Greek yogurt, ice chips, protein whey, and flax seed. She gets to school by 8:00 AM. When she gets to school, she normally checks her email and goes to meetings. Her first class of the day is grade 8 at 8:40. During Mrs. Hall's classes one of the things she enjoys teaching is the Fireworks photo editing program. At her lunch time, she usually eats a salad or homemade vegetable soup. She helps people all day long on the computer. Most of the time, she gets home at 5:00 PM and goes for a run or goes on the computer to check Facebook. That was a day in the interesting life of Mrs. Hall.

iPhone 5 vs. Samsung Galaxy SIII

I asked 100 people over 4 grades at Bow Memorial School which of these phones they liked more. The winner of the vote was the iPhone, but the Galaxy SIII was very close behind. The iPhone had 51 votes, the Galaxy had 46, and the both had 3 votes.

The iPhone comes in the colors black and white, and is $199 for 16gb of data, $299 for 32gb, and $399 for 64gb. The iPhone 5 is about 5 inches long and about 2 and a half inches wide. It also has a Retina display screen and a 4-inch (diagonal) widescreen Multi-Touch display. It also had an 8-megapixel iSight camera. Also, some other features are a built in GPS, 8 hour battery, "Siri," and USB connections.

Meanwhile, The Galaxy SIII is about 5 and a half inches long and about 3 inches wide with a depth of about $\frac{1}{3}$ rd of an inch. The Galaxy has an 8-megapixel camera and has HD recording. Also, it has S Beam Buddy photo share, share shot, AllShare play, Smart stay, Social tag, Group tag, Face zoom, and Face slide show. However, it does not matter to me. So, which do you feel is better?

Weird Sciency Stuff

By Natalie Kay and Allison Leger

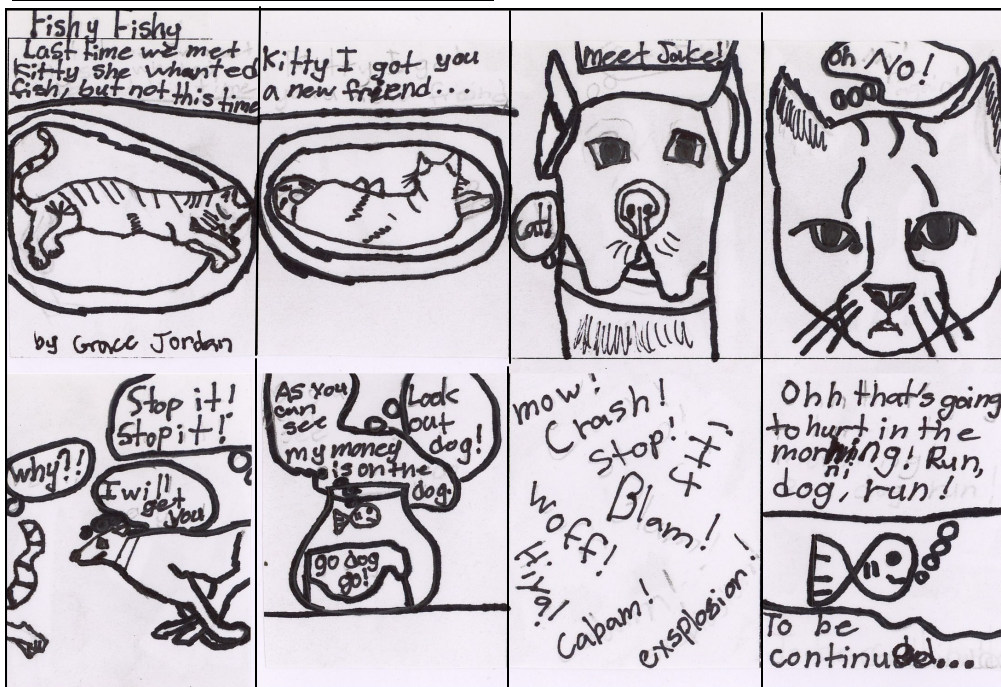

Did you know that on January 14, scientists discovered a flying frog? It leaps from tree to tree in the Vietnamese forests. They use their freakishly flappy forearms to 'fly' around along with their toes that have flaps of flappy flesh on them.

You may soon be able to print out electronic devices on your home computer; you may even be able to print a taco!

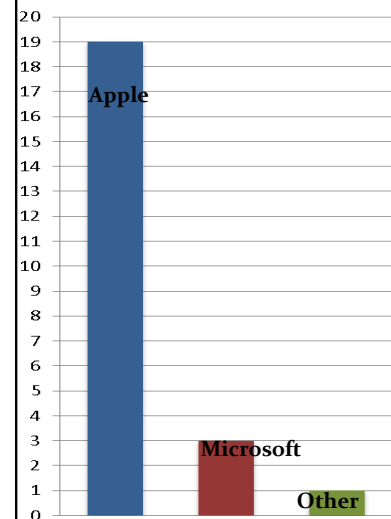

Scientists recently discovered a fish in Hawaii that can climb a waterfall with its mouth. They use the same movement with their mouths as they do to eat algae.
